

Associate Membership

Another solid brick in the wall of a great foundation.

Associate membership brings you closer to customers, potential customers, and competitors by providing you with the following benefits:

Networking Opportunities

Connect with industry colleagues at the local, state, and even national levels to share information and make important business contacts. From local home shows to statewide Board meetings, there are committees, councils, and many more ways for you to build critical relationships with fellow professionals, customers, and suppliers.

Industry Intelligence

Stay informed by being in the loop on vital legislative alerts, regulatory and code concerns and requirements.

Advocacy/Lobbying Efforts

PBA is the voice of the Pennsylvania housing industry and represents members involved in all aspects of home building and remodeling. Standing together, our members are also a powerful force for keeping housing a priority. When you join a local builders association, you will also become a member of both the Pennsylvania Builders Association and the National Association of Home Builders.

Credibility in the Marketplace

Being part of the local, statewide, and national association says something about your company and how you do business. We encourage you to use our logos and build confidence with your peers, your customers, and the community you care about.

Consumer Recognition

PBA continues to build a reputation for being a solid source of consumer information on home buying and home renovation. PBA is also clear about promoting the value of "doing business with a member." PBA members are encouraged to link to the pabuilders.org website from their website as an additional resource for the savvy consumer.

Money-Saving Benefits

Competitive insurance programs, discounts and savings on national brands and services, and more - there are benefits for every member.
